CHANGE IN OWNERSHIP OF SANITARIUM TRACT

Mr. John Mangold, a Prominent St. Louisan, Interests Himself in Choice Eureka Springs Property

For the past fourteen years, Mr. John Mangold and family, of St. Louis, have been frequent visitors to Eureka Springs. They came here first on account of the poor health of Mrs. Mangold, whom Mr. Mangold had feared was a confirmed invalid. Her complete recovery is now evident to any who meet the good lady, and the fact of her recovery has made for Eureka Springs a lasting friend in the person of Mr. John Mangold, the president and general manager of the Mangold Stave and Cooperage Company, of St. Louis, one of the largest institutions of its nature in the United States. Since their coming to our resort, various members of the family have been greatly benefited by the use of Eureka Springs water during their frequent visits, and they are again guests of the city, occupying the Bacon cottage on Prospect avenue at the present time.

For several days past there have been rumors current of a possible change in the ownership of the splendid Sanitarium tract of 1600 acres south of the city, but no one outside of those directly interested were able to locate the probable purchaser, whose name was made known today by the transfer of the properties to his hands.

The writer sought Mr. Mangold today, and questioned him relative to probable plans. He found that gentleman to be one of those conservative men of affairs who believe more in work than words. He briefly stated that he had purchased a one-third interest in the tract mentioned, from Mr. M. W. Swope, and that while improvements were contemplated, he was not ready to state just when and of what nature they would be.

Mr. Mangold became interested in this tract through Dr. Chas. E. Davis, owner of the remaining two-thirds interest in the property, who has been the family physician during the period of their visits to Eureka Springs. He is a firm believer in the efficacy and virtues of Eureka Springs water, and a great future for Eureka Springs. He has a wide acquaintance with influential men throughout the central and eastern states, and his apparent interest and belief in Eureka Springs is a compliment that will be a source of encouragement to the people of our city, whom the Times-Echo feels confident will welcome and aid his interest in the resort.

Mr. Mangold states that heretofore his company has been operating almost exclusively with timber secured over the territory traversed by the Iron Mountain Railway, and the writer would infer from his conversation that at least a part of the timber used might henceforth be secured from this section.

Besides being president and general manager of the Mangold Stave and Cooperage company, Mr. Mangold is a dealer in farm and timber lands, and all kinds of lumber, the headquarters for which business are located in Harviell, Mo.

Big line of Postals, comic, and also local views, now at Bare's, Crescent Confectionery.

Governor Names County Boards

Governor Donaghey Saturday announced his appointments of members of the county boards of equalization in all the counties of the state except Madison and Washington counties, which have no equalization boards, being exempt by special act of the legislature.

Governor Donaghey states that he exercised great care in the selection with the view that in each county the board would carry out the intent of the law as indicated by its title—the equalization of the taxes. The object of the governor in making the appointment, it is believed, was to select members in each county who would act in harmony with the State Tax commission.

Following is the board appointed for Carroll county:

Carroll—(Eastern District)—J. S. Fancher, Berryville; T. C. Freeman, Berryville; A. C. Alread, Rule. (Western District)—G. F. Wilson, Beaver; A. Werrell, Eureka Springs; B. A. Langston, Eureka Springs.

Home-Made Candies

Lloyd Bare, of the Crescent Confectionery, has secured the services of a competent candy-maker, and hereafter home made sweets will be a feature of this house's service.

This indeed prepares this popular candy house to suit all tastes, for they handle a very high-grade of confections made by the best manufacturers.

Succumbed at Last

John P. Cook, one of the city's old-timers, passed away last evening at his headquarters in the Cook building on Main street.

In his younger days, before disease had made of him a life cripple, Mr. Cook was a cow-boy in the then Wild West. When he grew tired of this life, he settled in Mr. Vernon, Mo., from which point he was brought to Eureka Springs in an invalid's chair, which he was never able to discard, and he paid the penalty of youthful neglect of the laws of health by spending thirty years of his life in helplessness and suffering, never being able in all that time to get about save in a wheel chair.

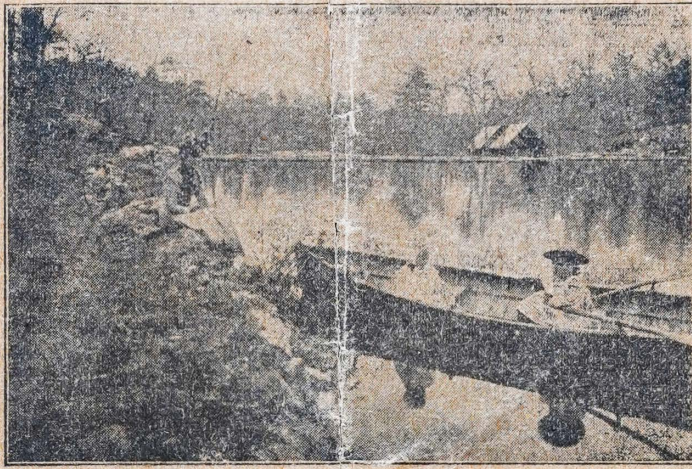

He owned a number of business houses on Spring street at the time of one of the city's disastrous fires, but lost all. Other investments have been made since, but mostly on Main street, his latest building having been erected about three years ago.

Mr. Cook was a charitable man, and many of the poor around him will feel the loss of a friend in his death.

Another thing is told to his credit, namely, that he would not permit the name of a good woman to be maligned in his presence.

His wife and their son, Fred, have cared for the sufferer in his last hours, and were joined yesterday by an older son of deceased—the half brother of Fred, who came from Joplin.

Mrs. Thos. Gooch is here from Springfield, visiting her father's widow, Mrs. Mollie Williams. Her daughter, Mrs. F. W. Crone, of Dallas, Tex., is also a member of this pleasant family party.

NEWS OF THE COMMONWEALTH

IMBODEN LEADS

Imboden, Ark., Aug. 2.—According to reliable reports which have been made, more live stock is shipped from here than any other town between Springfield, Mo., and Memphis, Tenn. The large shipments of corn will probably entitle Imboden to first place in that line also.

PADLOCK ON THE LID

Magnolia, Ark., Aug. 2.—The Sunday lid in Magnolia is clamped down and padlocked every Saturday night promptly at 12 o'clock. Every body has to be on good behavior and there is some talk about putting a stop to cows chewing their cud on the Sabbath in order to be sure that the peace is not disturbed. Railroad spikes are used, it is stated, to keep the doors of juice joints in place and it would hardly be possible to get the door of a meat market open with a fig chain and a span of mules. The lid is of such an air tight variety that some people claim that medicine taken on Sunday refuses to work.

START GOOD ROADS CAMPAIGN

Salem, Ark., August 2.—One of the most important campaigns for good roads ever undertaken in the state began here today when Congressman W. A. Oldfield, accompanied by three experts from the Department of Agriculture, opened a two weeks tour of the second congressional district. In addition to discussing the good roads proposition, topics of general interest to the farmers will be considered. C. T. Harrison will have charge of the good roads movement, G. A. Boll will discuss animal husbandry and A. D. McNair will deal with various crops. The following schedule has been arranged: Salem, Monday, Aug. 2; Ash Flat, Aug. 3; Black Rock, Aug. 4; Pocahontas, Aug. 5; Tuckerman, Aug. 6; Calico Rock, Aug. 7; Mountain View, Monday, Aug. 9; Sulphur Rock, Aug. 10; Judsonia, Aug. 11; Heber, Aug. 12; DeValls Bluff, Aug. 13; Brinkley, Aug. 14.

HIGH PRICE FOR ELBERTAS

Prescott, Ark., Aug. 2.—A price of $2.40 a crate, net, has been received by shippers of Elberta peaches from here, this amounts to over $1,200 a car. It is stated that the net profits from one large orchard near here will be about $30,000 this year. About 50 cars will be shipped from it.

REBUILDING BONANZA

Bonanza, Ark., Aug. 2.—A new Bonanza is going to replace the town which was destroyed by fire a short time ago. Merchants are already making plans to erect up-to-date stone and brick buildings in place of the frame structures which went up in smoke. The prospects for a bigger and a better Bonanza are brighter than ever before. The total loss on account of the fire was about $75,000.

HAD TO ASK FATHER

Hot Springs, Ark., July 30.—Mrs. Doc Andrew of Hope is wiser now than she was a few days ago, as is also her husband, as they discovered that in order to get married it was sometimes necessary to have father's consent. Mrs. Andrews, who was Miss Gladys Allen, eloped with Mr. Andrews to Hot Springs where they expected to be married immediately. While endeavoring to secure a license she stated her right age which put a damper on proceedings as she had not reached a marriageable age according to law. Fortunately her parents forwarded their consent in due time and then everything was lovely.

Words can not express our appreciation and thankfulness for the kindness and sympathy shown us and for the beautiful floral offerings of the many friends at the funeral of Grandpa Life, and for the beautiful services and kind words of Rev. J. N. Young over the remains of our dearly beloved father and friend.

Samuel A. Life,
Mrs. Jessie Ervin.

CIRCUIT COURT CONVENES FOR THE AUGUST TERM

Judge Maples Greatly Pleased With the New Court House.—Candidates for Various Offices Make Speeches

At the Churches

FIRST M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH
Our Sunday school superintendent was out of Sunday school and was missed. We always miss Mr. E. E. Augue, but the work was well done by Mrs. Minnie Perrill, our faithful assistant superintendent.

We enjoyed a splendid address by a Mr. Moore, superintendent of Sunday school in Methodist church of Columbus, Kas. He leads a list of 300 young people. His words were very encouraging and helpful.

We get a great deal of encouragement and help from our many visiting friends. So glad to have them come.

A good all-round day.
An unusually profitable League service.

F. A. LARK, Pastor.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Notwithstanding it was a hot day, yesterday was a good day at the Christian church. The minister, B. L. Allen, preached in the morning on "The Common Salvation," Jude 3, and at night on "The Great Salvation," Heb. 2:14. The audiences were fair at both meetings. At the morning meeting there were two additions to the church and three more in the evening.

Beginning at the morning meeting, next Lord's day, the minister is going to preach a series of seven or eight sermons on the Book of Revelation. This is a much neglected book, and those who desire a better knowledge of it, should hear these sermons.

CALVARY BAPTIST

There was a mixture of joy and sorrow in our services.

Bereavement in the family of one of the Sunday school and B. Y. P. U. workers, saddened the young friends of Miss Esther Franks, whose removal from our midst follows the death of her father.

The baptism of a young lady occurred in the afternoon, the baptism of the old First church building being used for the ordinance.

A pretty incident of the Sunday School hour was a public expression of appreciation for the pastor's funeral address when Dr. Bolton passed away. The Sunday school lesson brought forth the suggestion of encouraging our co-workers, and scattering flowers along life's pathway for our friends and neighbors. To Superintendent Barnett several young ladies told of the kind words spoken by the Masonic fraternity and by saint and sinner regarding the beautiful address, and this teacher and lover of men felt that it was a fitting time to cheer the heart of a faithful pastor by giving him the assurance that good had been accomplished by his ministry.

At the communion service at the morning hour, Dr. Regan paid a beautiful tribute to Dr. Bolton, a beloved deacon in the consolidated church and for many years senior deacon in the old First church. Dr. Regan recalled that just one month ago, Dr. Bolton had been present and helped serve the sacred emblems.

Pastor White's sermons were full of gospel interest.

Mrs. Fannie Collinsworth-Summers and baby came over last evening from Grand View, for a visit with Mrs. Jesse Littrell.

If the Commissioner Kizer, and Contractor Perkins, who had to do with the building of the new court house for the Western District of Carroll County were not satisfied with the appreciation that had already been expressed for their splendid work, they must be after listening to the compliments paid it by Judge J. S. Maples, today. He is delighted with the structure, its appointments and furnishings, notwithstanding that all of the new furniture did not arrive in time to be placed for the opening of the court.—Among the items which have not arrived being the corrugated rubber matting for the aisles, stairs, the Judge and the chairs, and the chairs of the court.

As is to be expected before the opening for the new court house, an opportunity was afforded by the candidates for Mayor, City, Faye, and the prosecutor.

At the noon hour, Judge Maples had completed the empaneling and instructing of the Grand Jury. As usual, with Judge Maples, the instructions were of a far reaching nature. He does not believe in having laws on the statute books that are not enforced, and believes that the way to get rid of bad laws is to enforce them—a most logical argument.

The Petit Jurors were also sworn in before the noon adjournment. A few minor cases and dismissal of cases occurred this afternoon.

Origin of the Word Ozark

The origin of the word "Ozark" is puzzling. Professors Reynolds and Nelson of the University of Arkansas, who are digging deep into old manuscripts, encyclopedias, histories and ancient works in order to reach a solution of the question. Each has his theory but neither is certain that his conclusions are correct. Professor Nelson is inclined to the belief that before this name originated the name Arkansas in some form or other was applied to the northwest section of the state. In a letter to C. W. Pool of Springdale, who has long been trying to find the origin of the word Professor Nelson says that from what he can gather from authorities at hand the expression "To Arkansas" was very common among the French and Indians, but was in use by using the prefix "Aux" before the word "Arkansas," which would read "Auxarkansas." "In the course of time," says Prof. Nelson, "it seems that the last syllable of this expression was dropped off and finally the expression was shortened to Ozark. The next step then would be to transform the expression into 'Ozark.'

C. H. Smith, of the Smith Tie and Timber Company, is a guest at the Basin Park.

ALL WENT DRY

THE Illinois Issue has received many compliments on the good work it is doing in drying up Illinois, but none stronger than this: A mail train was wrecked somewhere down state and some bundles of Illinois Issues, in bright green wrappers, were scattered along the track. A number of milk cows that were being driven to pasture that morning mistook the green bundles for grass and ate them. Every cow went dry.—The Illinois Issue.

THIRST OUTGREW WHISKERS

"YOU must drink hot water with your whisky," the doctor told his patient. "Otherwise you musn't take it at all."

"But how shall I get the water?" the patient queried plaintively. "My wife won't let me have it for whisky toddy."

"Tell her you want to shave," the doctor said, and took his departure. The next day the doctor called and asked the wife how his patient was.

"He's raving," the wife replied. "He shaves himself every day."

CHANGING HANDS

For sale in Arkansas this summer than to statements of various parties in real estate dealers in Eureka Springs. In the eastern part of the state, the best timber land are changing hands. Much of this to $20 an acre. From an agricultural excellent one as the land, when cleared, for purposes.

of this valuable timber land is changing hands. The lumber business is being rapidly developed in the state. A number of new mills have been contracted for the past few weeks and a number that have been idle for several weeks are running again. Reports from the southeastern part of the state, where a number of mills were forced to shut down on account of heavy rains which made it impossible to handle the logs, are running full time again.

Lumber men are feeling better at the present time than they have for several months in regard to trade conditions. Increasing sales, better prices and good lumber are held responsible for this state of affairs. There is an increasing demand for yellow pine, oak and cypress and business is improving along all lines.

BUTTER AND MILK FOR THE SOUTH

THE South has always been a laggard in dairy matters, and the result is thousands of dollars are sent North the year round for creamery butter, etc. There is no reason why this condition should continue. Here in the South the pasture season is longer than in the West or North, and all the grain feed necessary can be grown cheaper than elsewhere. It is up to the farmer and planter to start his own dairy, and not buy from the factories. He will find it more satisfactory, more convenient, and more profitable. The Tri-State Fair at Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 23th-Oct. 9th, this year proposes to make its dairy cow and dairy exhibit a big feature. Premium for the prize butter cows of the Middle States, and for the cows of Mississippi, Alabama, Arkansas and Tennessee will be offered. Special premiums are offered to beginners. The modern sanitary and economical dairy in all its workings, including separators, churns, cans, and even milking machines, will be demonstrated. All the best types of dairy cows will be exhibited. Every farm in the South should have its own dairy, which will furnish enough milk and butter for home consumption, and also enough to sell for ready money. The way to start is to start right. The show at the fair will be an education in itself. Liberal premiums are offered for all kinds of dairy products. Send for catalogue.

Funeral of Mr. Franks

The funeral service of Spurgeon Charles Franks occurred at the residence of the bereaved family Saturday evening at 8 o'clock.

Mr. Franks was a native of Ohio, having been born at Orleans in the year 1858. He was 51 years of age—older than he appeared to be, by several years.

He was married to the lady who is now his afflicted widow in the month of May, 1886. Two children are living, one (an infant) having passed on ten years ago. Esther, the daughter, is with the mother. Charles, the son, being employed in Boston, and absent when this sudden blow fell upon the family, but very fortunately for him he had recently enjoyed a happy visit at home with his parents and sister.

The solemn vesper service was in charge of the pastor of the First M. E. church, he being the pastor of the family and of which church the deceased was an attendant, it being his intention to be present at the Sabbath morning service, dreaming not that his next worship of the King should be in the Celestial City. In the early morning of Saturday while at peaceful rest, during calm repose, so far as can be known, the husband, father and friend, was not, for God took him.

The pastor was kindly and splendidly assisted in the service by the Rev. White, of Calvary Baptist church, he having been an appreciative friend of deceased.

Sweet hymns were sung as would have been chosen by our departed brother, appropriate addresses were made, and the blessing of him who doeth all things well invoked for the stricken ones, who hasten now toward their former home at Kendallville, Ind.

L. W. R. LONG.

Mrs. S. C. Franks will return to Eureka Springs soon, accompanied by her son, to pack their household goods for shipment back to their old home at Kendallville, Ind. The family own a beautiful residence there, to which they will return, their stay here having all along been considered only temporary.

country life, but in common with all other tillers of the soil, is blue over the crop prospects. Corn, melons and all vegetation are burning up for the want of rain.

Miss Dora Pyatt has returned from a visit at Mundell with her sister, Mrs. John Schnitzer. Another sister, Miss Bertie, has now gone to Mundell. These visits of her sisters have not only brought pleasure to Mrs. Schnitzer, but they have been a great help as well, at this busy season on the farm, when so many hired hands are to be fed and made comfortable. Mr.
Schnitzer has large farming interests.

cottage on Pine street, from Long View, Tex., who are here to benefit the health of the last-named.

Mrs. Laura Shotwell, mother of Mrs. Arthur Perkins, will be here soon from Jackson, Miss., to spend the remainder of the summer. She is very fond of Eureka Springs.

Miss Willie Lee Hall is serving as organist at the Episcopal Church since the removal from Eureka Springs of Miss Alta Hall, who had been organist for a long while.

Mrs. W. Cannon, daughter and son, Miss Lydia and Mr. Frank Cannon, the charming family of a prominent Mississippi cotton planter, are at 28 Ridgway avenue for a summer's stay.

Mrs. L. M. Coleman, of Ayr, Neb., is here to visit the grave of Mrs. Triggs, the missionary worker who spent her last days in Eureka Springs and was buried in Odd Fellows cemetery. Mrs.
Coleman was reared by Mrs.
Triggs.

George McGinnis was brought home quite ill from Cassville, Mo., last evening, Drain & Mclone's ambulance being called to the depot to convey him home.
Mr. McGinnis had been out on a business trip, buying horses for his livery.

F. F. Kreyer, director of the Pierce City band, came down yesterday for a visit with his old friend, John G. Pulliam. These two musicians traveled all over the south together, some years ago, with a repertoire Company, and also played with the First Regiment Band of Bentonville.

Ernest Glennly has arrived from Chicago for his annual visit with his mother and old friends.
Mrs. Kate Glennly and all Eureka Springs. His wife had been here two weeks with her mother, Mrs.
A. A. Riley. After another fort-night's stay, Mrs. Glennly will return to Chicago with her husband.

Miss Ocie Adams has become a partner of Miss Lena Meek in the millinery establishment known as Marean and Meek's, buying out the interests of the senior partner. Mr. Marean's health has so wonderfully improved of late that he and his wife will probably return to their former home or locate elsewhere.
Mrs. Marean has found the trimming trying on her eyes, and finds it necessary to rest them.
Miss Meek has had considerable experience in trimming in Parsons, Kans., and Springfield, Mo., before buying here, and is competent to take charge of this part of the work, while Miss Adams takes charge of the sales.
Miss Meek leaves for the wholesale houses in a few days.

Mrs. T. E. Clark and son, Bruce, have just returned from a delightful visit with Mrs. L. Adkins, of Alpena. Mrs. Adkins' beautiful home lies near the top of a mountain, giving a commanding view of the surrounding country. One probably could not find a grander outlook in this or any other country. Mrs. Clark brought some fine Alberta peaches from the Adkins farm, which elicited wonder and admiration from all who saw them.
Miss Alma Adkins and Mrs. Clark made a pilgrimage to Carry A.
Nation's place, two and a half miles distant. This zealous temperance reformer was not at home, but her brother, Mr. Moore, and his wife, gave them a cordial welcome to the cozy cottage. Mr. Moore showed a large gold medal given to Mrs.
Nation by the State W. C. T. U.
of Kansas, on which was inscribed,
"To Carry A. Nation, the Bravest Woman in Kansas." Thus ended a visit that will long be remembered.

The Analysis of Eureka Springs Water

Analysis of Eureka Springs water, by the best chemists in the country, shows that in each gallon of 231 cubic inches there are less than six grains of chemical ingredients. This is an almost incredibly small amount. Here is what the analysis shows each gallon of 231 cubic inches to contain:

Sodium chloride	0.19 grs.
Sodium phosphate	0.09 "
Sodium carbonate	0.15 "
Sodium sulphate	0.13 "
Sodium borate	4.43 "
Sodium carbonate	0.47 "
Sodium bicarbonate	0.08 "
Sodium chloride	0.31 "
Sodium chloride	5.85 grs.
Sodium chloride	0.14 parts in million.
Sodium chloride	0.07 "

It is stated that there is in each gallon of Eureka Springs water 231 cubic inches of gaseous contents. The fact that the proportion of nitrogen in the water makes it remarkable. A large proportion of nitrogen is also present in the water.

"There is much truth," at length said Bielinski, "in what Brother Smirnov says. Has any other brother any suggestion to make?"

A young Russian arose, a florid-faced, clean-shaven youth, with blue eyes and a sweet expression. His voice was soft and he smiled as he talked.

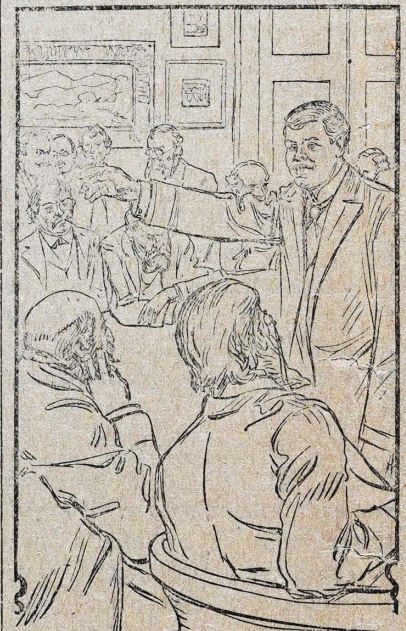

"He must not disappear," said the speaker, "as Brother Smirnov says, neither can we keep him. He would be an elephant on our hands. Neither would it be safe to turn him loose with our secret in his brain and on his tongue. It seems to me, with all due reverence to my elders—and here he smiled and waved his hand—"that there is but one way. He must die and his body must be found under dividual is of small moment when weighed in the balance against the general good of humanity. Brother Smirnov will pass among you, handing each one of you a white and a black marble, a supply of which I have here, and Brother Kourbski will collect your ballots in a hat. A black ballot will signify removal, a white ballot life and some other expedient. Brother Smirnov!"

That member arose and stepped briskly to the side of the chairman who took a number of marbles from a drawer and poured them into a hat. Kourbski followed him about with another hat, into which the members dropped their votes. In the ghastly silence that reigned, Hardy could hear his heart beat plainly, and the marbles dropping, dropping, into the hat, rattled like paving stones falling from a height. As Kourbski stepped to the table and poured the marbles on it, the American arose, and mechanically twitching at his pince-nez, gazed with open mouth. A black stream poured from the hat.

"The ballots are all black!" announced the chairman. "I shall appoint Brothers Kourbski, Stankietch and Golovlev as a committee of three on ways and means. Gentlemen, you will retire into the adjoining room. Kindly reach your decision as soon as possible, for this, as I have said, is only an incidental matter, and we have much of importance before us."

The three members retired, closing the door softly behind them. The dream was becoming reality. Hardy, who was still standing, glanced about like a trapped animal, his eyes hunting some desperate means of escape. There was the window. He might dash at that and leap at the panes. The crash and the outcry which he would make might attract the attention of some passer-by. But, alas, the majority of the company were sitting between him and the window, and the shutters, which he could discern through the thick curtains, were, no doubt, heavy and well secured. His overcoat dropped to the floor and a scarcely audible "bump" attracted his attention. He picked up the garment, and slipped his hand into the pocket, where it touched the cold handle of a revolver. He remembered that a merchant had given him the weapon in the morning as a sample of a large stock of German imitations that could be sold at a much lower price than the American original. The merchant had said that it was a good weapon, despite the cheapness, and had requested him to try it.

"There Is But One Way—He Must Die."

such circumstances that the police will be led to believe he has met his fate through accident. This will come under the head, not of execution, but of a necessary removal for the good of the order."

"What method would you propose, Brother Kourbski?" inquired Bielinski.

"There are several methods that naturally suggest themselves," replied Kourbski, expansively. Hardy's eyes left the mesmeric spot and sought the speaker's face.

"For instance, he might be chloroformed and thrown into the Moskva, thus giving the impression that he had fallen in and drowned; or, a fine needle might be driven into the base of his brain, after which he could be dropped into the river; or, he could be taken out to some lonely spot, gagged, of course, to prevent an outcry, stabbed or beaten to death, and robbed. The gags could then be removed and this would cause the impression that he had been killed by footpads for his money and valuables. Fortunately, his attire, that of a wealthy aristocrat, would corroborate the impression. These are merely suggestions, of course. Would it not be well to decide officially on his fate, and then appoint a committee to settle the manner of his removal?"

Mr. Kourbski sat down and glanced about with a self-satisfied air.

"It is time," said Bielinski, rising and resting both palms on the table, "to bring this incidental discussion to a close, and proceed with the more important business of the evening. Nothing must be allowed to interfere with the great work which we have in hand: The destruction of so-called government and the establishment of universal freedom; the elimination of war, oppression and tyranny; and the inauguration of general and everlasting peace, equality and brotherhood."

As Bielinski spoke, his face flushed with enthusiasm, and his eyes glowed with the light of the dreamer and the Utopian. Murmurs of approval ran through the audience.

"You know," he continued, "how we propose to accomplish this great end. Government is merely a combination of the strong and the favored of the earth to oppress the weak. Laws are simply canons for the regulation of oppression. All these things are unnatural and artificial and are built on a substructure of superstition. We propose to render government impossible by making the governing profession so dangerous that no man will dare undertake it. But the question now before us is this: Here is a man in our midst who is not of us. He is a sympathizer with and a friend of our oppressors. He came to us, supposing that he was going to the house of the Princess Romanovna, and overheard our plans. He has discovered our place of meeting. Will it be safe to turn him loose, after exacting a promise from him that he will not betray us, if such a promise can be obtained, or is it your mind that he be removed, as Brother Kourbski suggests, for the good of the Order? In voting on this question you will bear in mind that the life of any one in the morning as a sample of a large stock of German imitations that could be sold at a much lower price than the American original. The merchant had said that it was a good weapon, despite the cheapness, and had requested him to try it. But it was not loaded.

At this moment the committee re-entered the room. It had transacted its grisly business with dispatch. Kourbski acted as spokesman.

"Mr. Chairman and Brethren," he announced, "we have decided that the most practical method is to bind the prisoner and drive an awl into the base of his brain. We have with us here a shoemaker, who can do the business scientifically. Then, in the early hours of the morning, when the street is deserted, we can throw him into Brother Ivan's cab, drive him to some lonely spot on the banks of the Moskva and drop him into the water."

"The committee already appointed will act in this matter," said Bielinski in a businesslike tone, "with the addition of Brother Ivan, who is a strong man, and the shoemaker."

Ivan and the shoemaker arose and the five men turned toward Hardy, who, during the absence of the committee, had been staring at the mesmeric spot of light on the table.

"Gentlemen!" he cried, backing to the wall and speaking with an inspiration born of despair and the immediate presence of a horrible death, "hear me for one word!"

The suddenness of his appeal caused his appointed executioners to halt, while every face in the audience turned toward him in wonderment. "No man is ever executed without being allowed a last word, a farewell. Even the law, which you say is an invention of tyrants, permits that! Surely (as you say that you are killing me in the interest of humanity) you cannot be unjust and savage. All I ask is one word before I die, a parting message, perhaps, to be given to my friends."

"Speak, then," commanded Bielinski, "but be brief, as we have weighty matters to discuss. Do not waste your breath in pleading for mercy."

"I was going to visit the Princess Romanovna," said Hardy, pale as death, but speaking distinctly, "not because I am an aristocrat, for I come from America, the most democratic country on earth. I was invited to visit her because I saved her life on the Amur through my skill with the pistol. My skill, which has made me famous in my native land, enabled me to kill two Chinese who were attempting to abduct her. It is second nature to me. I shoot with absolute precision. Had I my weapon here I could pick off in succession, from where I stand, the buttons on Mr. Bielinski's coat."

"What is that to us?" asked the chairman. "You are talking to gain time. Give us your parting message and we will try to get it to those for whom it is intended."

"I could hit," proceeded Hardy, "that explosive ball yonder, the invention of Mons. Hulin, and blow you all to atoms, and by God! if any one here stirs or attempts to lay hands on me, I'll do it!"

With these words he suddenly whipped the pistol from his pocket, and, leaning forward, aimed at the ball.

CHAPTER XXXI

"In the Name of the Czar!"

The nihilists were thrown into panic by this sudden move on the part of Hardy. For the moment he was in control of the situation, though he was well aware that he could not remain so for long.

The American backed to the door, still aiming at the ball, passed through it after some little nervous fumbling for the knob, closed it behind him and started to run. He crossed the empty room in three strides, now found himself, not without, however, making an effort to lock the door, which was impossible, as there was no key on the outside, and no bolt.

A savage uproar broke loose in the room which he had just quitted—the sound of men struggling, curses, shouts—and ere he had traversed half the distance of the hall, the door behind him flew open, and a half a dozen nihilists were vomited forth. Several of them were armed, and, pointing pistols at Hardy, they shrieked:

"Drop that revolver, or we shoot! you cannot escape!"

At this moment the hall door was thrown open and a man rushed to Hardy's side. It was Mordecai, the Jew, with his red eyes, his bushy red whiskers his big hook-nose.

"Mr. Hardy!" he cried, "my dear kupp!" and he sprang between the American and the pistols that were pointed at the latter's body. "Stop, brothers, stop!" he shrieked. "What madness is this? What is this man accused of? I know him. He is a friend, I will vouch for him on my life. I will defend him. If you kill him you must kill me, too!"

"He is a friend of aristocrats," explained Bielinski, stepping forward; "he entered here by mistake, he says, but it is possible that he is a spy. At any rate, he knows our secret; he has overheard our plans and he will betray us. He must die."

And at this moment a loud hammering was heard on the outer or street door.

"Silence!" gasped Bielinski, in a whisper—a whisper, nevertheless, that could be heard more distinctly in the sudden silence than a shout. "What is that?"

As if in answer to his question, the door opening into the hall flew wide, and the old woman looked in, disheveled and pale, moaning as she crossed herself rapidly.

"The police! The police!"

Again that thundering on the door sounded through the house, and a stern voice could be heard commanding:

"Open, in the name of the czar!"

Hardy was forgotten. The czar, their arch-enemy, was at the gates of their fortress and his name was a word of terror. The nihilists flew past the American on tip toe, into the hall, several of them jostling and almost knocking him over in their eagerness to escape.

"Come with me!" whispered Brethren, who had regained his feet. "You must not be found here!"—and seizing Hardy by the arm, he also jumped for the open door. Hardy made no resistance, and was soon running down the long hall with the others, led by the Jew. They came to a narrow flight of stairs, leading to the cellar, and down this they crowded, scurrying and fighting, some of them losing their footing and rolling to the bottom. A loud crash arrested Hardy's attention. He was standing in the darkness, but at the farther end of the hall was a hanging lamp, turned low, and by the light of this he could see the door fly in splinters and the officers of the law pour in.

"Throw your bomb, brother, throw your bomb!" said Bielinski; and Hulin, leaping like a cat into the middle of the passage, hurled the sphere down the hall with an oath. There was a muffled report, not loud, and much jingling of glass. The light went out, but, by the momentary flash of the explosive, Hardy could see several policemen pitch forward on their faces.

"Come, come away!" said Mordecai, and Hardy scurried down the dark stairs with the Jew.

Captured Baby Whale.

The smallest specimen of a baby whale ever caught by a British trawler was landed at Grimsby lately by the King James. It was brought up in the trawl net in the North sea, and was so small—15 inches long and 3 pounds 3 ounces in weight—that the fishermen could not realize that it was a whale until an expert certified the fact.—London Standard.

Use Soap as Economy.

Soap in its modern form seems rather to be an evolution of economy and commercial convenience than an evidence of a great accession to cleanliness. The rich to-day in their homes use unguents, oils, meals and bath powders in preference to it. A lather is not in this age as picturesque as the old method, when a salve poured liquid soap over her mistress from a costly jar before the bath stepped down into the water.
